

New Drugs Prescribed for Dialysis Patients

*Kum hyun HAN

Devison of Nephrology, Department of Internal Med, Inje University College of Medicine Ilsan Paik Hospital, Korea, South

Kidneys are involved in a variety of physical functions, so dialysis cannot replace everything a healthy kidney can do. Therefore, medicines can help patients with dialysis stay healthy longer. Over the past few years, dozens of new drugs have been approved. Some of them has been used for dialysis patients. Here we will review the indications and use of these drugs.